

I have never been seventy before !!

a story

by

Peter Byers

alternative title

A boy from Meg

Preview

Hello from Peter Byers – I was younger before I wrote this book.

Several folks have been wittering on at me to write a story of my life (the word biography seems far too grand for it). Well I could not muster up enough enthusiasm to get started.

Then, on a day in October 2010 at three O'clock at night I awoke with a start and realised that a title (I have never been seventy before) had come into my head !! That was the start of lots of work, a labour of love. It has been a lovely job sitting in my comfortable armchair pecking away with one finger at the keyboard on one of my computers.

It just grew and grew !! I have completely worn out one whole finger and started on another !!

I had a terrible dilemma, as the size grew, the price grew – that was largely because I had chosen to have it printed in glorious colour. It is also because Print-on-Demand is inherently more expensive than conventional publishing. There is no way that I can be tempted to pay for a thousand plus copies and then to tote them around bookshops. I don't have the experience or knowledge of persuading a publisher to take a chance on publishing it for me.

I could of gone for 'Black-and-White' to reduce the price. But I got a sample print and was 'blown-away' by the quality !!

It is a work of history presented in an easy to read manner. Folks that have seen the advance copy say 'if you have heard Peter speak, you will here him sitting talking to you as you read the book' !! It is being produced as something of which I am proud.

So, sorry it is so damned expensive. Just feel and see the quality, never mind the content. By the way, I get less than fifty pence for each copy sold.

If you cannot afford it, you could think about downloading an electronic copy, that is much cheaper.

AnyRoadUp, do read it somehow and laugh, learn and enjoy.